

15th Research Students' Education Conference

Everybody knows that 2020 has been a tremendously difficult year. The outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic has posed great challenges to researchers all over the world. These challenges can be related to fieldwork planning/conducting, mental health, thesis-writing process, etc. However, even in the absence of an ongoing global health crisis, research can be impacted by a range of political, personal, social, and cultural circumstances. Whatever has affected your research progress, take part in RSEC 2021 and share the challenges that you experienced and how you coped with them.

CALL FOR PAPERS!

Research in Challenging Times

The purpose of this year's conference is to explore how researchers negotiate times of crisis. We imagine a broad definition of what counts as a crisis and how it affected your research at any stage.

We invite 250-word abstracts for 10 to 15-minute presentations and/or poster proposals along with a brief biographical note.

This virtual conference presents an excellent opportunity for postgraduate researchers and staff to practice their presentation and communication skills by sharing their experiences and receiving feedback from a supportive audience.

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION

10th December 2020, 12 noon

University of Leeds

15th Research Students' Education Conference

Everybody knows that 2020 has been a tremendously difficult year. The outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic has posed great challenges to researchers all over the world. These challenges can be related to fieldwork planning/conducting, mental health, thesis-writing process, etc. However, even in the absence of an ongoing global health crisis, research can be impacted by a range of political, personal, social, and cultural circumstances. Whatever has affected your research progress, take part in RSEC 2021 and share the challenges that you experienced and how you coped with them.

CALL FOR PAPERS!

Research in Challenging Times

DEADLINE EXTENDED

15th February 2021, 12 noon

The purpose of this year's conference is to explore how researchers negotiate times of crisis. We imagine a broad definition of what counts as a crisis and how it affected your research at any stage.

We invite 250-word abstracts for 10 to 15-minute presentations and/or poster proposals along with a brief biographical note.

This virtual conference presents an excellent opportunity for postgraduate researchers and staff to practice their presentation and communication skills by sharing their experiences and receiving feedback from a supportive audience.

The conference will be held online in Spring 2021 (more details to be announced soon)

Follow us:
@UoleedsRSEC

For submissions and queries:
edursec@leeds.ac.uk